The Approximate of Coalition of Coalitio but it is not likely that Mapai would propose such a coalition. The Progressives' proposal would in effect mean that Mapai should give way of their own accord to the General Zionists on the Trade portfolio, while the General Zionista must withdraw their demand for a Development portfolio.

The situation is somewhat complicated because Mapai had already offered to give the General Zionists a Development portfolio to be coupled with that of Industry, But Mapai envisaged a Ministry with control over the development of mines, oil, fuel, tourism and the Development Authority, while Mr. Israel Rokach, who aspires to the Development Ministry, wants in effect the splitting of the Finance Ministry, with all routine financial matters covered by the Ordinary Rudget remaining under the jurisdiction of the Finance Minister and the Development Minister assuming responsibility for all matters covered by the Development Budget.

The Progressives' announcement was made tonight after their proposal was discussed yesterday with Mr. Ben Gurion in an interview with the Minister of Justice, Mr. Pinhas Rosen, and Mr. Moshe Kol. Their proposals have also been discussed with Mr. Peretz Bernstein, of the General Zionists.

only by Rabbinic law. Regarding the crops of the Seventh Year, a further commandment applies: all fruit growing in the year is considered "owner-less"; therefore the owner of a field or orchard must not prevent anyone else from gathering what he wishes.

The Torah links the law of Shemittah with that of the Year of Jubilee, in which all landed property returns to its criginal owners or their heirs; the Jubilee, however, does not suply nous, but only at that time, "when all ber inhabitants are upon her." that is to say, when the majority of the Jewish people are settled in Eretz Israel, and the land is divided among them as it was in the days of Joshua. According to the majority of Halakhic views, the Shemittah-year applies only, by Torahlaw, when the Jubilee applies—thus, in our time, the entire Shemittah commandment is mareely Rabbinic law.

As long as the State of Israel is not firmly established economically and the absorption of mass-immigration not fully completed, any suggestion of full observance of Shemittah seems unrealistic. And even when the State will have attained full prosperity and security. Shemittah observance in its proper form can only be thought of, if the entire economic life of the country is planned and organized accordingly, in a comprehensive "Seven-Year Plan."
